Construction Worker | Job description

Institute of Construction Materials

About the Institute

The Institute of Construction Materials is a community of international construction experts from across various disciplines. Having a close connection with academia and industry, we provide solutions for today's challenging problems. Our community relies on scientific research and educating young passionate individuals. Sustainability and environmental conservation had always been one of our key areas of focus throughout the number of projects.

About the job

As a construction worker/engineer, you will be working with our industry partners across various construction sites. The core responsibilities associated with this role are research and development. The right candidate must have a passion for product development and automating manual procedures. That being said, you are still required to carry out so much of physical work because of the nature of the industry. Having computer programming skills will help you progress in this role much faster. You must be physically strong and willing to travel between different sites.

If you are applying for Temporary Skill Shortage 482 visa, your occupation will be nominated as one of the following:

- Bricklayer (ANZSCO 331111) or,
- Civil Engineer (ANZSCO 233211) or,
- Electrician (ANZSCO 341111) or,
- Plumber (ANZSCO 334111) or,
- Metal fabricator (ANZSCO 322311) or,
- Welder (ANZSCO 322313) or,
- Excavator operator (ANZSCO 721214) or,
- Cabinet maker (ANZSCO 394111) or,
- Technical Sales Representative (ANZSCO 225499) or,
- Truck driver (ANZSCO 733111).

These occupations have a level of skill commensurate with the qualifications and experience outlined on the government website.

Requirements

- Must have completed the construction safety training;
- Experience in construction industry;
- Physically fit;
- Being able to perform manual tasks;
- Relevant qualification
- International applicants must have enough financial means to cover living expenses for a duration of one year.

Remuneration package

This is an ongoing casual position. The remuneration package includes $29.00 per hour before tax ($55,680 annual) salary plus superannuation with the opportunity to become a permanent employment. Sponsorship is also provided for international applicant as part of the visa processing.

Sponsorship procedure (for international applicants only)

The Institute of Construction Materials offers sponsorship to international construction workers as part of their visa application process with the Department of Home Affairs. We are offering sponsorship for temporary workers based on the conditions outlined by the Australian Department of Home Affairs for Temporary Skill Shortage Visa (subclass 482). The current construction jobs may vary depending on the project. However, most of the projects require skilled concreters, bricklayers, painters, excavators, steel workers, scaffolders, cabinet makers, and so on. You must have received a sponsorship offer from our human resources team before being considered eligible for the current employment opportunities.

Step-by-step sponsorship process:

1. Apply for the Construction Worker job position;
2. Receive the official letter of sponsorship offer from our human resources team. This is a unique document in a PDF format sent to your email address;
3. Pay the sponsorship fee using the link provided below;
4. Receive the offer of employment;
5. Apply for Temporary Skill Shortage visa (subclass 482). If you want us to purchase your health insurance cover on your behalf, please visit Overseas Workers Health Cover page.
6. Once your visa is granted, you may refer to accommodation for overseas workers to sort out your rental property in Sydney. There are plenty of rental properties available in Sydney. You may be required to pay additional fees if you want the Institute to rent a property on your behalf.
7. Arrive in Australia and start your job.
